Better for you

Study concept - IMM

... lets you choose how many learning modules you want to study each semester. You are also welcome to interrupt your studies should other duties prevail. Most students study five semesters part time to complete their IMM studies.

... is mainly based on distance learning which means that modules are completed by handing in home assignments. The degree course starts with an attendance phase, with participation being voluntary.

... follows a learner-centred approach which enables you to acquire new academic knowledge and combine it with real-life projects and cases arising from your own professional contexts.

During the learning process you will apply new methods and exchange ideas with your peers by means of student forums. Guidance/support is provided by us – your lecturers.

Recognition of competencies

Do you work in a junior management position in the maritime industry at sea or ashore and have you already gained professional experience and individual key qualifications?

Have you already passed examinations and gained credits at another university on an equal level?

We recognize existing skills and prior learning. As a result, the duration and cost of your studies can possibly be reduced.

What can be recognised?

1. Achievements at another university.
2. Competences acquired during your professional career.

Please find further information on the topic of recognition of competencies on the Internet pages of our degree course.
